KAMALSAGAQ SYLLABARY

---

1.1. History

The Kamalsagaq (Kamalian writing) syllabary is a writing system used by the Kingdom of the Kamalian Counties. As of June 18, 2010, it is the co-official script for the Kamalian language, along with the Latin alphabet.

The Kamalsagaq syllabary had been being used for presumably centuries before anyone outside Poseidon discovered Kamalia. In many urban areas of Kamalia, it is used to give text to a variety of street signs and advertisements. One striking feature of the Kamalsagaq is that it expresses the words which it is used to write in a phoneme by phoneme fashion. This simplifies the process of comprehension greatly, and is something most earthly scripts do not include.

Latin Transliteration

2.1. Latin Transliteration

The first efforts to write Kamalian in a script other than Kamalsagaq from American linguists in Kamalia's Satamuq county in 2009. In 2010, Cameron White adapted the latin script to write Kamalian vocabulary. The official Latin transliteration for Kamalian was invented by Cameron White in 2010. It is the most widely used form of transliteration and is even taught in some schools in the central counties of Kamalia along with Kamalsagaq.
